FREEZE-DRIED PROBIOTIC SUPPLEMENT

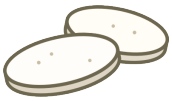

BlinkTech probiotic tablets

5 Billion

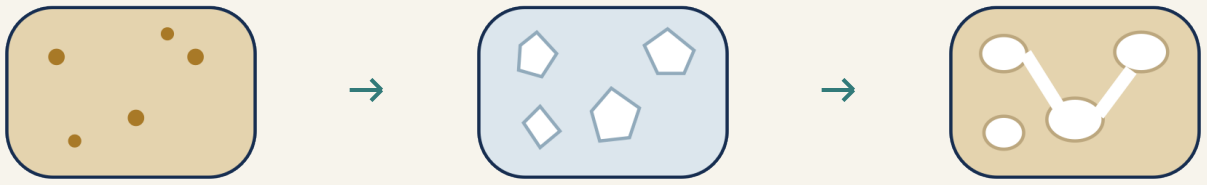

Colony Forming Unit (CFU) per tablet

Why the tablet breaks apart

Freeze-drying leaves tiny channels inside the tablet. Saliva enters those channels and helps the tablet break apart in the mouth, so you can take it without swallowing a whole pill or reaching for water.

Mix and fill

One serving fills each cavity.

Freeze

Ice forms inside the dose.

Dry under vacuum

Ice leaves pores behind.

What the format offers

No water needed

Take a dose away from home without finding a drink or mixing a powder.

One measured serving

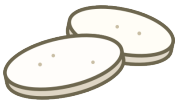

One tablet delivers 15 mg of a blend of three probiotic cultures. There is nothing to scoop or measure.

Doses stay protected

The foil seals each tablet separately. Opening one pocket leaves the remaining tablets sealed.

Who may prefer this format?

Some people dislike swallowing whole capsules. Others want a measured dose they can take when a glass of water isn't handy.

People who struggle with whole pills

Some people can swallow food and drinks comfortably but find a solid pill difficult. This format removes the need to swallow a tablet whole.

Older adults

An older adult who dislikes capsules may prefer a lightweight tablet that breaks apart in saliva. Each pocket holds a single serving.

Children ages 3 and older

The probiotic pack shown is labeled for ages 3 and older. Families can check the pack directions and choose a format their child can take safely.

People taking a dose on the go

A sealed sleeve fits into a travel bag. One dose can be taken without a glass, spoon or water bottle, and the rest stay in their pockets.

If you have a diagnosed swallowing disorder, ask your clinician whether this texture is suitable for you.

Choosing a probiotic tablet

The three strain identifiers are CP-9, LPL28 and SY-66. Use them to compare products by the cultures in each serving as well as the CFU count.
